Press Release LGBT Act of Witness Talk with us - not about us!

An Act of Witness took place at General Synod on Thursday, 9 February to draw attention to the extent to which the Church of England relies on the many hundreds of LGB&T clergy who minister faithfully across the Church of England despite the institutional prejudice and suspicion they often face. Over 40 members and supporters of the LGB&T Anglican Coalition greeted synod members as they entered Church House Westminster.

The Coalition has calculated that there are at least 1,500 LGB&T licensed clergy currently ministering in parishes, hospitals, diocesan offices and other ministries - over 13% of the total.

The Revd Colin Coward, Director of Changing Attitude said: "Most synod members, including several bishops, responded warmly to our message, and encouraged us to continue our campaign for full inclusion in the Church of England."

London & Southwark Diocese are home to a significant proportion with approximately 350 LGB&T licensed clergy - 25% of the diocesan workforce, but snapshots of deaneries in other dioceses up and down the country have revealed significant numbers (10-15%) are typical. Research by the union Unite in 2008 also showed that over 20% of hospital chaplains have same-sex partners and have moved into chaplaincy in part because they could be sure of equal treatment and support from their employer.

Yet the culture of the Church of England remains a hostile place for many LGB&T clergy who often have to hide their sexuality, and their treatment by bishops is inconsistent with some acknowledging same-sex partners while others overlook them.

Clergy members of the Coalition are available for interview.
